Jennifer Heynen is a member of several bead societies and an active participant in national bead shows in America. Practicality is the theme here; instead of, for example, advocating the purchase of an expensive kiln and other equipment, the author recommends asking to share space with a local studio, yielding a much smaller payout.

About half of her book demonstrates the fundamentals: tools and materials and the making, decorating, and firing bisque as well as glaze of beads, along with techniques, like raku, metal clay, and luster, among others. Then on to the 30 projects, ranging from a boyfriend black-and-white bead on a cord necklace to an elaborate autumn-bounty with acorns and leaves necklace, with rings, brooches, and bracelets well represented in the projects.
